GET INVOLVED!

By: Nathaniel Ferguson, Peer Resume Reviewer

Getting involved is my number one piece of advice that I can give to anyone in college. No matter the year, getting involved on campus is crucial for various reasons, particularly in terms of personal growth, networking opportunities, and career development.

Firstly, campus involvement exposes you to new experiences, challenges, and perspectives. This can foster personal growth and the growth of essential skills such as leadership, communication, and time management. Having these experiences not only enriches one's college journey but also helps prepare them for the professional world.

Secondly, campus engagement provides valuable networking opportunities by creating connections with a diverse range of individuals, including peers, faculty members, alumni, and professionals. These connections can lead to mentorship, internships, and other career-enhancing opportunities, laying the groundwork for future success.

Lastly, involvement in campus activities can significantly boost one's resume and career prospects. Employers often value candidates who have demonstrated leadership and participation in student organizations or volunteer work. Employers recognize the transferable skills that come along with being a part of an organization.

It is important to note that it is never too late to get involved. When the opportunity presents itself, take it and you won't regret it. If I had thought it was too late, many opportunities that I currently have, I would have never had. So... go out there and get involved!
