Teaching Race and Culture Social Studies Lesson Ideas

Dr. David Childs, Ph.D.
Assoc. Professor of Social Studies and History
Northern Kentucky University
When teaching I often integrate various forms of popular culture and primary sources into my lessons. That is music, film, speeches, cartoons, literature, comic books, advertising, social media etc. I will offer several examples (Elementary, Middle Grades and Secondary) of how teachers can integrate popular culture into units and discussions about race aligned with Kentucky social studies standards.
Fifth Grade Sample Lesson Ideas
As a part of a larger geography and American history unit, the topic of slavery, race and culture can be woven throughout the unit.
