Understanding Literature

Online Asynchronous – Soliday

This course will introduce students to English studies (what it is, why we do it, how it is useful) through studying a variety of genres (such as poetry, drama, fiction, and prose), periods, authors, styles, etc. Students should leave ENG 200 with a basic understanding of literary studies, including critical analysis, close reading, and writing about literature; a desire to read for pleasure; and basic skills in reading and critical interpretation. Texts may include Mary Shelley's Frankenstein, Leslie Marmon Silko's Ceremony, Doyle's Adventures of Sherlock Holmes, and selected poetry.

Understanding Literature

Online Asynchronous – Walton

The course will primarily look at the three major genres in literature. I half jokingly call it “mostly Irish” because for many of the examples of the three genres I have chosen Irish writers, because of my own interest in Ireland and Irish literature. The students read sections of Gulliver’s Travels, Dracula, and The Picture of Dorian Gray. These narratives will be supplemented with videos and discussions of various possible approaches to those narratives. Then, we move on to poetry and examine various elements of poetry and the poetic tradition, looking at many various writers and traditions from William Shakespeare to the writers of the Harlem Renaissance. We end with an examination of Tragedy and Comedy by reading, discussing and viewing selected videos of the plays Oedipus and Wilde’s The Importance of Being Earnest. We also discuss such far flung comic traditions as Slap Stick and Black Humor. I also offer many extra credit opportunities and encourage my students to bring in their own creative work.

Understanding Literature

Online Asynchronous – 7 weeks – Smith

This seven-week online offering of Understanding Literature will work to enable students to hone their approaches to reading, analyzing, and writing about literature. Students will read short stories and poems, share thoughts and analysis in discussion boards, and write short response papers as well as analytical papers. The text for the course is Digging into Literature: Strategies for Reading, Analysis, and Writing (ISBN 978-1-4576-3130-6). The literary works in the text will be supplemented by works available online.

Survey of British Literature I

Online Asynchronous – Kent-Drury

Raymond William said that at any time, some components of culture were residual (from the past) and some were emergent (new and pointing toward growing, later importance). In this course, we study important concepts underlying the literature and culture of the medieval, renaissance, and 17th/18th century periods of British literature, focusing on materials that help us understand how literature functioned in the past, but also how we came to understand ourselves as “modern.” We also consider materials you will not study in later courses, but which will help you understand materials you will encounter later in your academic study of literature. as well as why people resort to literature to explain what exceeds humans to comprehend and express the inexpressible--in other words, how humans persist, and how imaginative thinking exceeds understanding. Come join us.

Literature and Film: Jane Austen & Film

Online Asynchronous - Kent-Drury

In addition to their appearance on book lists for nearly 200 years, the works of Jane Austen continue to be read, studied, imitated, parodied, and rendered in film to the present day. What about these books has kept them continuously in print since they were written? And what makes their content updatable and popular to the present day in film and narrative adaptations? This course will explore women as writers and as the subjects of writing in 18th- and early 19th-century literature through the works of Jane Austen, as well as in the films that continue to interpret them for today's audiences. We will also watch films that will help us to understand the cultural context within which the novels were written. Likely topics of discussion will include societal constructions of femininity, masculinity, and gender roles; men's and women's education; marriage and the family; class issues, including labor and poverty; and the increasingly global political context of Regency England. We will also touch on some of the aesthetic and philosophical concerns that seem both familiar and alien to readers today

Writers in Context: The Big Three of Fantasy

MWF 12:00-12:50 - F2F - Gores

In this course we will examine the works of J. R. R. Tolkien, C. S. Lewis, and J. K. Rowling both as exemplary of the fantasy genre and as reflections of the authors' cultural concerns. For Tolkien and Lewis, the latter will include anxieties over cultural loss and decline, war and devastation by dark forces. Rowling's somewhat more contemporary concerns are connected to racism, government repression, conspiracy theories, and the role of information media. Critical Theory

TR 1:40-2:55 - Online Synchronous - Krouse

Literary or cultural criticism may begin with our reactions – pleasure or enjoyment, identification or revulsion, boredom or irritation. But as the discipline of English Studies trains us to interpret, analyze, and make arguments about literary and cultural texts, we also learn to go deeper than those initial reactions by using different methodologies and intellectual frameworks.

In Critical Theory, students will survey theoretical approaches including structuralism, poststructuralism, Marxism, feminism, psychoanalysis, ecocriticism, critical race theory, postcolonial studies, animal studies, and queer theory. Not only will they read and engage with theoretical texts, but also they will learn to use critical theory to situate their analyses of literature, cinema, and other narrative forms. Are you interested in learning new ways to read, think about, understand, or analyze literary and cultural texts that you care about? Then Critical Theory is for you!

Students will be required to purchase two books for the course: Global Literary Theory (ISBN 9780415783026) and Beginning Theory (ISBN: 9780719079276).

Graphic Novel

MW 2:00-3:15 - Online Synchronous - O'Callaghan

Graphic novels, or sequential art, are one of the world's great storytelling media, but it is only in recent years that the genre has been critically recognized as a major form of communication and contemporary creative arts. ENG 368 explores the graphic novel's joint ancestry in the fine arts and literature. Students will develop the critical skills necessary to read and understand this deceptively complex medium, focusing on the themes of family, childhood, coming of age, politics, sexuality, class, illness, violence, horror, the monster, and cultural/ethnic diversity. Considerable attention will be given to how words and images interact to create meaningful narrative structure and spatial visualization in graphic novels.

Texts to be studied include:

- Art Spiegelman, Maus I: My Father Bleeds History
- Alison Bechdel, Fun Home: A Family Tragicomic
- Marjane Satrapi, Persepolis: The Story of a Childhood
- Fábio Moon and Gabriel Bá, Daytripper
- Alan Moore and Dave Gibbons, Watchmen
- Karen Reyes, My Favorite Thing is Monsters
- Junji Ito, Uzumaki

Studies in Literature & Other Arts

TR 12:15-1:30 - Online Synchronous - Wallace

Emily Dickinson is now recognized as one of the greatest poets in the English language. Her artistry thrived in spite of social distancing. Her poems have inspired a remarkable body of work by visual artists and composers, many of them alive today. Our primary literary text will be Dickinson's Complete Poems, supplemented by other resources in print and on the web. Our study of visual art will include Language as Object: Emily Dickinson and Contemporary Art. Our study of music inspired by Dickinson will range from songs composed by Aaron Copland in 1950 to those composed by Jake Heggie in 2015. Our third text will be I Took My Power in My Hand: NKU Students Create Emily Dickinson Art, the catalog for the 2015 exhibition featuring artwork created by students in our own English and Honors classes between 1998 and 2014. For the individual projects at the end of the semester, students will have the option of writing a research paper or creating your own artistic response to Dickinson in the medium of your choice. Earlier assignments will include a mixture of discussion boards, papers, and online presentations.

Pre 1800 Exploration/Travel Literature

Online Asynchronous - Kent-Drury

In this course, you will gain perspective on the historical, cultural, and aesthetic ways in which Western European explorers and travelers imagined the “New World” people and landscapes they encountered in the late 15th through the 18th centuries. Through film, letters, journals, and popular literature, we will also investigate how such materials influenced media debates and public policy.

We will begin by analyzing the observations of explorers and travelers which they reported in the popular narratives they published for Western European audiences. By analyzing their attempts to describe in European terms what they had never before encountered, we will learn about what the authors thought about themselves, about other peoples and places, and about how land and natural resources should be used.

Where we can, we'll also explore how native peoples responded in kind.

Methods of Teaching YA Literature

M 4:30-7:15 - Hybrid - Cullick

Folklore and folkloristics comprise the study of traditional beliefs, customs, and stories, as they evolve in human communities, and as they pass through generations, mostly through non-official means. We will focus on the basic field of folklore as an object of study, as separate from printed literature (although, of course, it appears there at times). In addition to providing a broad understanding of folklore, we will also explore the methods, history, and breadth of this field as well as the cultural backgrounds of our regional folklores. Because we are anchored in an area so rich in folkloric resources, we will look at these as we explore the field. This course will be of particular interest to students of literature, history, writing, and culture. The course offers ample opportunities to explore individual and personal interests.

Affrilachian Literature

M 4:30-7:15 pm - F2F - Yohe

Where and what is Affrilachia? In this course, we will read, discuss, and write about fiction and poetry by the most influential and accomplished members of the Affrilachian Poets (AP), including founding members Frank X Walker, Nikky Finney, Crystal Wilkinson, and Kelly Norman Ellis. We'll also consider works by newer members of the AP collective, Bianca Lynne Spriggs and Keith S. Wilson (Wilson is an NKU English B.A. alumnus). Most or all of these writers will visit us via Zoom. We will investigate the layers in the term "Affrilachian" from its origins almost 30 years ago, when Frank X Walker invented it—fusing "African" with "Appalachian"—up to the present day when APs have expanded to include others in the wider region. We will examine how their works of literature embrace the mantras of the APs: "making the invisible visible" and "lending voice to the voiceless," while they engage with seminal themes of family, cultural history, social justice, rootedness in place, and more. Class members will write literary analyses and make presentations, and they will create culminating final projects that embody a diverse range of forms and approaches.

Fiction Writing

MWF 11:00-11:50 am - Online Synchronous - Donahue

This workshop class provides an overview of modern short fiction in its many forms, while also offering students an opportunity to explore and hone their own voices as fiction writers. In these explorations, we'll consider the ways in which craft choices affect our writing and how we can best hone our creative skills through exploration, production, and revision (but never perfection!). Throughout the class, we'll develop a strong writing community through workshop, frequent responses to classmates' works, and analyzing published works of fiction. We'll explore a multitude of genres with a strong emphasis on both realist and non-realist modes, and we'll discuss publishing in the vast fiction landscape. Students will write and revise one work of flash fiction and two short stories. Prereq: ENG 231.

Poetry Writing

T 1:40-2:55 pm - Online Synchronous - Moffett

We know a poem when we see one. We can even dissect a poem: there is the line, the image, the metaphor, the meter, the stanza, etc. Yet every poet must create her/his own definition. And this definition will alter as your skills expand, your reading deepens, your “state of being” (Pollock) becomes understood. To help you on this journey, we will spend time reading current work by well-known (and some up-and-coming) poets, and we will study the poet’s craft from Addonizio and Laux’s The Poet’s Companion. The majority of our time, though, will be spent on your writing. We will have three workshop rounds and a variety of writing prompts and small group workshops. The course will culminate in a chapbook of your original verse.

This course will explore the structure (and the history of the structure) of a poem. We will consider form as “already occupied” (Bakhtin) spaces, i.e. to write a sestina is to understand the history of the sestina and the practitioners who came before you. We will consult Boland and Strand’s The Making of a Poem and will write formal poetry up to midterm. After midterm, we will focus on what is being published now: free verse. We will read some first collections of poetry (maybe from Donika Kelly, Amy Meng, and Kai Carlson-Wei) to think about how the “ghost of form” is present in their free verse. We will, of course, workshop your poetry all semester. The course will culminate in a chapbook of your own original poetry. Prereq: ENG 231. ENG 334 is not required as a prereq for this class.

Introduction to Writing Studies

TR 12:15-1:30 pm – Online Synchronous – Cellio

Welcome to English 204, Introduction to Writing Studies. This course is designed to familiarize us with the rich history and diverse sub-fields contained under the banner of “writing studies.” As a declared subject or major, writing studies is relatively new at most universities; however, this newness belies thousands of years of thought and study about writing itself and the ways we “do” writing. As Charles Bazerman notes, “the study of writing is a major subset of the study of the history of human consciousness, institutions, practice, and development over the last five millennia; and composition—the learning and teaching of writing—is in the middle of all that.”

We will begin the semester by looking back to the origins of writing studies in America, focusing on a few events that continue to shape the field today. As the semester continues, we’ll investigate several key topics and theories that obtain across multiple sub-fields of writing studies, including rhetoric and composition, business and professional writing, and multimodal forms of composition. Together, we will consider issues like process vs. product, rhetoric and rhetorical situations, audience, style, and visual rhetorics. At the end of the semester, we will take some time to think deeply about revision and to practice a few revision strategies.

Writing occurs in every type of business profession and business environment in existence today. Writing in and for the business situation involves producing various genres of documents in various delivery modes. Through this course, you will be introduced to, explore, and engage with documents for business including but not limited to proposals, reports, memos, emails, texts, and letters.

While in the course, you will develop your ability to analyze various rhetorical situations common to business writing and produce the appropriate response (in terms of genre of document, style of writing, use of visuals, choice of deliver mode, etc.) to these situations. You will come to understand business writing through a rhetorical lens, especially in terms of recognizing how audience, exigence, purpose, organization, and delivery modes shape contemporary business writing practices. This course prepares you to write in any business situation.

Persuasive Writing

R 1:40-2:55 pm - Online Synchronous - Bowers, N.

In this course, you will explore and practice visual rhetoric strategies with writing as they relate to, create, and form a persuasive document.

Consider the Covid-19 Dashboard which NKU uses to inform. The colors, font type, style, and size (typography), positioning and organization of content (layout), icons and images (visuals) function as more than decoration – they create and form a persuasive argument for readers. These strategies work together to direct reader eyes and thinking toward an initial perception of a document that cooperates with the argument within.

With this course, you will be able to recognize, purposefully select, and apply visual rhetoric strategies to your own documents to build the desired argument for your audience. Exploring when, why, and how to apply these visual strategies to your writing will strengthen and add another layer of experience to your writing skills set.

Digital Writing And Rhetoric

T 12:15-1:30 pm - Hybrid - Bowers, T.

This class will investigate--through readings, discussions, and various writing assignments--what it means to write in the age of Twitter, Facebook, Instagram, and smart phones. You will explore concepts such as digital literacy and information literacy in an effort to engage in what literacy, as a writer and reader, entails in the digital age. You will also explore a range of media, including audio and still and moving images, to consider how digital writing is entangled with these forms of communication. And you will explore the concept of circulation, how digital media has impacted the way texts are produced and reproduced and linked and assembled. You will have an opportunity to explore and engage in these concepts through a major project of your choice.

ENG 371-003

Traditional Grammar

MWF 11:00-11:50 am - Hybrid - Cullick

This course will introduce you to the forms and functions of words, the parts and patterns of sentences, and the correctness of punctuation and usage. You will explore the various meanings of terms such as grammar, rule, and tradition. You will investigate issues in the use of language, and you will arrive at the point where you can analyze the grammar in a passage of writing. This course will help you to understand and appreciate the English language, to analyze the language that you encounter daily, to be a more effective writer, and to teach others the conventions and possibilities of English. If you are preparing to teach English, to write professionally, or to succeed in your workplace—or if you just want to know how our amazing language works—this course is for you!

Writing in Workplace Genres

R 6:30-9:15 - Online Synchronous - Bloch

This course will help you understand and practice the process of grant seeking and proposal writing. It will be grounded in the principles of service learning because you will be expected to write grant proposals addressing real situations, directed towards real audiences, and positively impacting the community.

Additionally, by participating in the Mayerson Student Philanthropy Project (<https://inside.nku.edu/civicengagement/programs/mayerson.html>), you will experience the grant process from the funder's viewpoint. You will analyze and interact with nonprofits and ultimately, as a class, select an organization to receive funding, conducting appropriate communications throughout the process.

Introduction to Cinema Studies

Online Asynchronous – Gazzaniga

This course introduces students to cinematic language and the basic tools of film analysis. We will examine how formal elements such as mise-en-scène, cinematography, editing, and sound create meaning in films. We will also consider a variety of film genres, narrative styles, and artifacts of film movements across cinematic history. In addition to understanding the basic terminology of film production and form, students will examine key concepts of film theory and study how film reflects and constructs cultural ideologies. Films we will study may include: Double Indemnity, Breathless, The Graduate, Do the Right Thing, No Country for Old Men, Lost in Translation, The Hurt Locker, Jackie Brown, Grizzly Man, Moonlight, Arrival.

Romantic Comedies

M 4:30-7:15 pm - Online Synchronous - Alberti

One of the most enduring film and literary genres, the romantic comedy records our culture's evolving ideas about gender, love, and sex. Our course will explore this evolution through US cinema and culture from the 1930's through today, starting from contemporary romantic comedy and our own changing constructions of gender and sexuality. This course is especially well suited to students interested in cultural studies, cinema studies, play/screenwriting, and/or gender studies, or anyone who loves romcoms!
