Notes: This is a sample four-year program of study for a philosophy major. It represents only one way a philosophy major can meet graduation requirements. No one path through the general education requirements is best for the philosophy major, but we do recommend taking communication classes early in your college career. Deficiencies should be addressed as early as possible. You should try to complete your general studies requirements in your first two years. Since the philosophy major requires only 30 hours of coursework, it is possible to meet the requirements in fewer than four years. Beyond your general education requirements and the philosophy major you will have over 50 additional hours of coursework to complete for graduation. These are listed here as electives. You may want to take additional philosophy courses. You will need a minor though many philosophy majors also take a second major to enrich their resume
