Strategic Planning 2013

This is an opportune time for Northern Kentucky University to embark upon a strategic planning process as we near the end of our current plan, the Points of Focus. NKU will celebrate its 50th anniversary in 2018, and our process this year will result in a five-year plan that will serve as our roadmap toward that defining milestone.

During the Fall semester, I sought advice from the campus community on the timeline, format, and committee composition for a strategic planning process. I had conversations at the Fall planning collaboration retreat, with the college Deans; the department Chairs; the executive committees of Staff Congress, Faculty Senate, and the Student Government Association, as well as our directors and administrators. Based on that feedback, we have put together a strong and nimble strategic planning committee that will be assisted by several work groups this spring. To produce the best plan possible, we will also seek the collective thinking of our entire campus and the community through face-to-face forums, electronic forums, surveys, social media, and written suggestions.

Schedule for Open Forums

The world as we know it is changing rapidly, including the world of higher education. It is becoming an increasingly competitive environment, and substantial challenges confront us. To continue to provide our students with the best education possible, we must seek effective solutions and opportunities that address these challenges.

This new plan will be our roadmap for developing and implementing strategies, programs, and initiatives. The plan will articulate a clear, succinct mission and vision of the university, and it will set strategic priorities that will guide our work and our investments.
