I. POLICY STATEMENT

Objectives

Every college and school and the academic programs within them shall offer a schedule of summer courses based on student demand and consistent with the following objectives:

- Promote student success by offering courses students need to progress toward graduation
- Offer courses with sufficient year-round student demand
- Improve student enrollment and retention
- Avoid course cancellations
- Provide opportunities for interested faculty to teach in summer and winter sessions
- Generate net revenue to support the university's core mission

Course selection

In consultation with department chairs and based on the above objectives, the deans of each college will determine which courses should run in each summer and winter session. The following guidelines should be used:

- In general, most undergraduate courses should have at least 15-10 students, and most graduate courses should have at least 10-5 students. However, judgment will need to be used in applying these guidelines.
- All cancellation decisions should be finalized no later than the close of business on the Friday before a session begins. Classes should not be cancelled after a session begins.
- In making decisions about which courses should be offered, chairs, deans, and faculty should consider the seats available in other classes for the students to enroll in so their graduation progression will not be delayed.

Compensation

- For each course taught during summer and winter sessions, faculty will be compensated at 3% of their 9-month salary (up to an $85,000 cap) per credit hour.
Faculty may teach a maximum of 2 courses during the entire summer session and only 1 course during the winter or summer 3-week session.

Independent studies, projects, capstones, practicums, theses
Faculty teaching supervising independent studies, projects, capstones, practicums, theses, or similar work in the summer that are approved by their chair and dean will receive a $150 stipend per student per credit hour.

Compensation for faculty on 12-month contracts
In general, faculty on 12-month contracts may not earn additional compensation for teaching courses in the summer or winter sessions. Exceptions can be granted if approved by the chair, dean, and provost.

Timing of winter compensation
Compensation for the winter session will be paid in its entirety in the January pay period.
