Professional Concerns Committee

Minutes for April 21, 2022

Virtual Meeting (on Zoom Conferencing Software), 3:30 pm

Members Not in Attendance: L. Dynan, B. Green, B. Karrick

1. Call to Order, Adoption of the Agenda
   a) The meeting was called to order at 3:30pm. The agenda was adopted unanimously without changes.

2. Approval of the minutes from the April 7, 2021 meeting
   a) Draft minutes from the April 7 meeting were approved without dissent.

3. Chair’s Report and Announcements
   From the Chair’s notes:
   a) Neither Faculty Senate nor the Executive Committee have met since our last meeting.
   b) University Legal Counsel Joan Gates is leaving. I will serve on the search committee. The committee will be co-chaired by Bonita Brown and Tammy Knochleman. If you have ideas regarding what skills or experience the university general counsel should have, reach out to me.
   c) Updates:
      i. There is no news regarding a new vendor for student evaluations of instruction.
      ii. At our most recent meeting, we discussed revisions to the Values and Ethical Responsibilities policy. During that meeting, Faculty Advocate Phil McCartney and members of this committee made suggestions regarding language in the policy. The proposed changes have been incorporated into the draft. The draft was sent to the internal auditor and member of human resources. We await a response.
      iii. Earlier in the semester, we discussed revisions to the Intellectual Property policy. We discussed two new draft revisions to the IP policy that is currently in the Handbook. The draft revisions are Copyrights, Inventions and Patents.
Members of this committee raised concerns regarding the creator’s rights and obligations, specifically the provision that the Creator shall grant the University the right to use, perform, display, copy, or reproduce Traditional Works. This is not part of the current IP policy. The draft revision states that the University shall have right and license to use, reproduce, modify, and create derivatives of instructional materials. That is also not part of current IP policy.

Members of this committee raised concerns about student ownership of work in the Inventions and Patents draft revision. The attempted clarification regarding student rights did not address the concern about whether students who assist faculty in research projects could be considered Innovators in this policy.

Members of this committee raised concerns about net royalties. Under existing policy, the Innovator keeps 100% if the revenue generated is less than $5,000. Under the proposed policy, the Innovator would keep only 60%. The proposed changes would reduce Innovator share of revenue.

In most regards, no changes have been made to the draft revisions that address concerns raised by members of this committee.

d) DISCUSSION:

-- Question: How do royalties work with upfront money for a trade publication?
-- Faculty retain ownership of traditional works. A publication is a traditional work.
-- Only scientists need to be concerned with the royalties under the patent policy.
-- The draft revisions of the patent policy would take a greater cut of royalties than the original policy.
-- It is procedurally important that PCC recommend to the Senate that it should vote in opposition to these IP policy changes. All of the changes are faculty unfriendly, some student unfriendly. Senate needs to take a clear stance and recommend we retain the status quo 2009 policy.
-- In the chat: “I think we should reject the revisions.”
-- Should PCC reject the changes and recommend retaining the original (despite the revision including some clarifications)?
-- J. Farrar: Recommends a “sit down” with Samantha Langley (Vice Provost-Grad Ed, Research, Outreach) to discuss our objections, find compromise. The faculty proposal is reasonable. We need an updated policy, some clarifications in the policy are good, and some sections are objectionable. We need to find common ground. This would be easier in a conversation rather than in emails. If acceptable, a meeting can be scheduled with K. Fuegen (PCC Chair), K. Katkin, J. Farrar (Senate President), J. Bloch, S. Langley, and others with concerns.
-- Such a meeting would be a mistake, a dead end. Every change is faculty unfriendly. If Senate’s compromise is to accept 2 or 3 of 5 changes, faculty are worse off. It appears that S. Langley has been unwilling to compromise even though the Provost, in PCC meetings, has said some of these positions are unnecessary.
-- The Provost was explicit that there was no reason to split royalties under $5000 as the proposed revisions continue to state.
-- In the chat: From the Provost: “I just shared my agreement with PCC on the rates with Sam.”
-- Let K. Fuegen know if you want to participate in a meeting with S. Langley.

4. Unfinished Business: discussion of proposed changes to the Faculty Senate constitution (two attachments)
   a) For purposes of voting in Senate elections, how shall the General Faculty be defined?
      i. Background: the constitution states, “For the purpose of election to, and service on, the Faculty Senate, Faculty is defined as General Faculty who spend 25% or less of their time in an administrative appointment and who have held a faculty appointment for at least one academic year before assuming a Senate seat.”
      ii. It is difficult to apply the 25% rule, because Human Resources does not classify people according to how much time they spend in an administrative appointment. The consequence is that the Elections Committee must make judgment calls about whether someone is considered part of the General Faculty. The goal is to create a definition that can more easily be applied and that relies less on judgment calls.

BACKGROUND:
The proposal is to delete 25% or less in administrative appointment and replace it with 50% or more in teaching, research, or creative activity. This includes professional librarians. The definition shifts from measuring administrative work to faculty work which is consistent with the AAUP definition.

Possible alternative ways of thinking about this:
1) From the Elections Committee: Instead of percentages, there should be a list of people excluded from the general faculty for the purpose of Senate. (e.g. Provost, Associate and Vice Provosts, Deans, Associate Deans, School Directors, Department Chairs).
2) Does the person have supervisory or evaluative responsibilities over others? Generally, faculty do not supervise or evaluate other faculty. People who conduct annual performance review could be excluded from the general faculty for the purpose of Senate.

DISCUSSION:
-- Faculty Advisors may not fit into these definitions. The list of excluded persons would include faculty advisors.
-- The current policy seems fine. The proposed changes are mostly fine except for the numerical change. The 50% or more in teaching, research, or creative activity should instead be 75% (explicitly including professional librarians). This would not include faculty advisors who only have faculty status due to KERS.
-- If we could define this in terms of reassigned time, your teaching and research would be 75%.
-- The problem is that while the colleges have information about who receives reassigned time, that isn’t necessarily reported to anyone. 200+ faculty have 25% reassigned time. 30+ faculty have at least 50% reassigned time (mostly Program Directors). Do we want to exclude Program Directors?
-- Yes, exclude Program Directors. We want to exclude people with that much reassigned time. (Another member says, “I agree”).
-- In the chat: “So let’s keep those people off the Senate!”
-- In the chat: “I do not believe that program directors should be excluded.”
-- Some advisors have 75% release time because they are really not faculty. They were hired to be staff but teach one class to be faculty. There should be a 10 month contract that is not a faculty contract.
-- J. Farrar: Now that KERS is resolved we no longer need to hire staff as faculty. The 75%/25% definition is about defining faculty by what they do, not what they don’t do. When PCC recommends the percentage we wish to use, Senate President will ask Deans to define that, provide a list of people, at the beginning of the academic year. Supplying the list will need to be in the clarifications. Senate President will publish that list in the event someone feels wrongly excluded.
-- In the chat: Provost: “We’ll seek to convert where we can and when ‘faculty advisor’ positions open up, they’ll become staff positions.”
-- Staff Congress excludes anyone who is part of another governing body. Staff Congress members can’t also be on Faculty Senate. Should we do the same?
-- Item 4.C. suggests that Faculty Advisors (First Year Student Success Hub) would be excluded from VPUAA. If NTT faculty who are not in colleges are excluded, that only leaves Honors.
-- We need to be careful about identifying programs and units to not inadvertently exclude faculty.
-- Why not just use a list of people who can’t serve on Senate?
-- The problem is that the list would need to be updated every time there is a new title. For example, we create a position Unit Head that has evaluative responsibilities – we might not want them on Senate but their title wouldn’t be in the exclusion. We’d need to revise the Constitution for every new title.

-- Why not do both, provide a definition AND titles?
-- J. Farrar: If we define the parameters well, we don’t need to list titles.
-- In the chat: “Another problem with listing all the job titles that should NOT be eligible to serve is that most of us don’t know all the job titles that are out there today.”

-- Is it worse to exclude someone from Senate or include someone who shouldn’t be on Senate?
-- Do many admins even want to serve on Senate?
-- If someone is elected from a legitimate academic department, we should defer to their choice. We could make a list of units that are eligible to elect Senators.

-- It is worse to allow Senators to serve who should be excluded. They might represent the administration’s views or take up Senate’s time on issues not helpful to faculty.
-- If we exclude too many people, Senate’s impact is weakened.
-- Faculty Senate would be much more weakened by allowing members to serve who are not really faculty.

-- How many departments have faculty who supervise and evaluate other faculty? Those who supervise and evaluate can tend less toward collaboration and more toward giving orders. This separates those who supervise and evaluate from other faculty.

-- One PCC member has a 25% reduction as a Program Coordinator which includes evaluating adjunct faculty. We need a clear definition.

-- In the chat: “It seems to me that some of these roles are not consistent over different departments. For example, our department program directors do not evaluate faculty. I would certainly classify anyone who formally evaluates full-time faculty as fulfilling an administrative role and thus ineligible to serve on the Faculty Senate.”

-- What do other universities do?
-- AAUP recommends the definition be based on time teaching, research, and creative activities.

-- Most faculty don’t want to spend time on Senate. The Senate is stronger when the Senators advocate strongly for their areas. A smaller, more dedicated, body would make a stronger Senate.
-- Faculty should be defined as those who do the teaching, research, and creative activity. Senators should be drawn from those who do teaching, research, and creative activity.

-- What if departments submitted names in advance to ensure those people are eligible before they are elected to Senate? This would ensure they are not in an administrative role.
-- J. Farrar: Suggestion, leave this alone. Senate President will need to ask Deans to provide a list of people based on the 25% or 75% definition. The 25% definition can work if we cannot simplify the definition.
-- Support given for the 75% percent definition. Concerns voiced that for departments that do not have primary teaching assignments as their core work, the percentage is a made up number. There needs to be an exception written, a clarification for those areas where percentages cannot be counted in course reductions. Maybe, in areas where a course reduction is not a valid measure, evaluating other faculty could be a substitute.
-- In the chat: “[To Senate President] -- I think the definition you wrote is perfect, except that the number should be 75%, not 50%. [To Library representative] -- I also agree that an exception should be written to keep Steely Library Faculty in the Senate, expressly.”

5. New Business: working conditions of faculty advisors
   a) When should faculty advisors be notified that they are expected to work during the summer?
   b) Should summer compensation rise as salary increases?

     -- moved to a later meeting.

6. Future Business

     -- Nothing at this time.

7. The meeting adjourned at 4:30pm.
